WRITING

Nowadays, shopping is an important part of everyone's life. Almost every day we buy or order something online. My project, which I am still working on, is aimed at finding out how people prefer to make purchases online or in-store. I have found some data on this issue and organised it in the table below.

I can identify two main features of the statistics presented in the table. The first one is that the majority of people prefer to buy grocery in-store. And the second key feature is that only 23% of people reported that they prefer to buy online. In my opinion, most people buy grocery in-store because you can choose them more efficiently in the supermarket. As for me, I also like shopping in the store more than online.

In conclusion, I would like to say that it is easier to buy things online, but better in-store.
